

All Above Board:

Great Governance for the Government Sector

By Julie Garland McLellan

A book of practical skills and tips for directors and senior executives of government sector organisations.

Government sector organisations are important. They provide many essential goods and services that underpin society and allow industry and commerce to function efficiently. They are diverse and span almost every sector of the economy from agriculture to zoo-keeping. Directors who serve on these boards play a vital role in the success of the nation.

Until the publication of All Above Board there was no comprehensive guide to assist in developing and applying governance skills specifically for the government sector.

Most governance literature is designed for the listed sector and takes no account of the specific duties and responsibilities attached to directing a government owned corporation. The roles of Ministers and Departments have no parallel in industry. Even highly skilled and experienced directors can flounder when they first encounter the complex highly regulated government board environment. For aspiring directors a government sector board is often a first step in a boardroom career; getting it right is crucial to ongoing success.

Now in its second edition, All Above Board will help directors and executives develop the skills they need for great governance and great outcomes.
